

To be held at LSUS next week

Liberal Arts career day planned

By Garrett Stearns

A two-day program on "Careers and the Liberal Arts" will be held March 12 and 13 at LSUS.

The program will consist of a panel discussion by area business representatives and another discussion by department chairmen of the College of Liberal Arts. Also scheduled is a "Career Information" period and a discussion of "Job Hunting Made Simple" by Phyllis Graham, director of placement at LSUS.

"Sponsored by the College of Liberal Arts, the program is for all LSUS students but is especially geared toward the liberal arts major," according to Dr. Mary G. McBride, dean of the College of Liberal Arts.

Reason for program

"The idea came from our concern of career possibilities for the liberal arts major, especially in a time of economic uncertainty. Both students and faculty members need to be aware of the opportunities available in the local community and nationwide with employers," Dean McBride said.

On March 12 the program will begin at 10 a.m. in room 108 of the Liberal Arts (LA) Building with a greeting from Chancellor Donald E. Shipp. This day's discussion, "Careers and the Liberal Arts," will be moderated by Dean McBride.

Area business leaders on this panel include Stanley R. Tiner, editor of the Shreveport Journal; Cecil E. Ramey Jr., attorney and past president of the Shreveport Chamber of Commerce; and James C. Gardner, vice president for administration of Southwestern Electric Power Co. and a former mayor of Shreveport.

"Exploring the Liberal Arts" is the panel discussion set for March 13 in LA 103 at 9:30 a.m. Moderator will be Dr. Gary K. Brashier, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs. Others on this panel are Dr. Dalton Cloud, chairman of the department of communications; Shirley Brown, chairman of the department of foreign languages; Dr. John W. Hall, chairman of the department of social sciences; and Dr. Moriece Gleason, chairman of the department of English.

Department heads speak

Dr. Cloud said, "The College of Liberal Arts communications curriculum is one of the fastest, if not the most rapidly growing areas in a modern society. Such areas as radio, television and investigative reporting are greater today than ever before and roughly 75 per cent of a person's day is spent in communicating — an area which will continue to grow."

"Knowledge of a foreign language is an important part in the basic preparation for a wide variety of careers; a student who misses an opportunity to study a foreign language is closing doors to himself and narrowing his career opportunities," explained Chairman Brown.

Dr. Hall will discuss areas dealing with the social sciences, particularly geography. Dr.

Gleason will refer to a recent study completed by the Modern Language Association of America noting the numerous jobs available to the English major, according to Dean McBride.

On the program March 13 at 10:30 a.m. in LA 107 and LA 109 is "Career Information" where representatives from various fields will meet with students and faculty to discuss career opportunities for the liberal arts graduate.

The numerous fields represented are accounting, advertising, banking, oral and written communications, credit reporting, data processing, education, federal government, finance and investment, allied health professions, insurance, law, law enforcement, local government, manufacturing, military, petroleum industry, real estate, social welfare and utilities.

Career information counselors include Peter J. Gaffney of Heard, McElroy and Vestal; Jack Lamb, president of Lamb Associates, Inc.; D. Q. Lucky, (See LA Career Day on page 8)

Election deadline

The deadline for filing for an elective office in the SGA Executive Branch is 5 p.m. March 11. Positions to be filled are president and vice-president. Information concerning offices may be obtained in Student Affairs, room 140 of the Liberal Arts Building. The Election Board will approve candidate's petitions March 13. Campaigns will be conducted March 17 through April 10. The Election Board will meet April 11 to verify election returns.

To qualify, candidates must have at least a 2.0 average, not be on any type of probation and be attending school full time. Night students may vote April 7-10 from 6:15 — 8:15 p.m. Voting for day students will be April 9 and 10 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Voting will be in room 236 of the Library Building for education and business majors and in room 107 of the Liberal Arts Building for liberal arts, general studies and science majors.

On fees, loans, university center, commencement

SGA recommendations acted on by chancellor

By Keenan Gingles

Chancellor Donald E. Shipp Thursday announced he had approved Student Government Association (SGA) recommendations allowing deferred payment of registration fees and the formation of a short-term loan service.

The chancellor's announcement came at an annual luncheon he sponsors for student organizations. The purpose of the luncheon — held at a local restaurant — was "to improve communications between campus groups," provide information, and answer questions, the chancellor said.

The details of both the deferred fee payments program and the short-term loan service are still being worked out, he said, adding he "hoped to have them ready in a few months."

The deferred payment program will be available on a limited basis, as prescribed by the SGA resolution that passed the senate Jan. 31.

Only 'hardships' considered

That resolution, which then went to the chancellor for his approval, provided that only "hardship" cases be considered for the program.

"Any person with some kind of hardship situation may be able to pay part of his fee at registration and make one or more additional payments during the semester where he can show a need," the chancellor said.

Stressing that the installment plan would not be available for everyone, he said, "There will have to be a procedure set up whereby persons will have to demonstrate a need." To qualify for the program, the chancellor said persons would have to apply in advance of registration.

Legality of fund use questioned

Chancellor Shipp's proposal for the short-term loan service came without formal approval by the SGA. An SGA senate committee had considered a bill calling for the service, but the bill was withdrawn from consideration because of a question regarding the legality of using SGA funds to finance the service. SGA funds are state funds. Tony Sanders, SGA president, broached the subject with Chancellor Shipp, who agreed to study the matter.

At the luncheon, the chancellor said state funds could not be used for the loan service, but the administration had found an alternate source of revenue.

"I have received assurances from a president of a local bank that his bank will begin contributing and assist us in contacting all the other banks.

"I feel like that in a short time the banks of our city will have contributed sufficiently...so that in a few months we will have donated funds on hand to create a short-term loan fund for students."

Chancellor on University Center

Regarding the University Center, the chancellor praised the efforts of the Long Range Planning Committee. He said the committee had set up a list of priorities as to what will be included in the building and suggested square footage for each type of facility. In addition, University officials have met with the center's architects, who are working on preliminary plans and specifications for the planned building.

The chancellor said the architects will have the preliminary plans ready in about two months. "We hope to bid the center sometime in the early summer and maybe have it under construction beginning this fall," he said.

Preliminary plans on site work for the center have already been submitted by the engineers, the chancellor said. Included in those plans are another "large concrete parking lot" to be located on the north side of the campus, between the Liberal Arts Building and asphalt lots, he said.

The new parking lot will include an access road to the loading dock of the University Center, according to the chancellor. Besides constructing a new lot for the north side, the parking lot on the southeast side of the campus (the "Gravel pit") will be asphalted, Shipp said. Lighting and underground utilities on the north side will also be a part of the site work.

Commencement changed

The chancellor also announced that the school's first commencement will be held in the Shreveport Municipal Auditorium, rather than the Civic Center as had been originally planned. The date for the ceremony is still believed to be May 15, though the Almagest could not verify it at press time. According to Chancellor Shipp, the location was changed to accommodate more guests. Sen. J. Bennett Johnston has been invited to speak, the chancellor said, although he has not replied.

LSUS's chances for tax revenues from Louisiana Downs are slim, according to the chancellor. Responding to a question from Senator Dubba Hermes, Chancellor Shipp said, "It is our understanding that the new state constitution that went into effect Jan. 1 abolished automatically all dedications of Administration 'doors are open'?

By Patti Kasselmann

The activist student of the late 60s and early 70s is apparently now just one nearly forgotten symbol in an era of national upheaval.

Administrators, faculty and many students breathe deep sighs of relief, muttering something about getting on with the business of education. And that's a good thing. However, the movements of a few years ago brought out something that perhaps many have lost sight of — student rights. What happened to our rights? Or do we need any?

In high school, the favorite comment of the instructors was: "Wait until you get to college, then you'll find out." Well, I'm here, and frankly, this isn't much better than high school. Now, someone will tell me how grateful I should be to attend college. I am grateful, very grateful, and I'm also angry and disgusted.

College is an intellectual environment, a forum for exchange of ideas between students and instructors, a place for experimentation of policies and programs, a locale for the growth of young adults into active, thoughtful, educated citizens. I guess I read that somewhere, or maybe I picked it up from some old movie, because that sure isn't LSUS.

What I have learned since I transferred here a year and a half ago is two basic principles: 1) Be to class on time, and 2) If you can't say something nice about LSUS and its staff, shut up. To put it mildly, I'm disappointed. Our school is new and I want to help it grow any way I can. But how can students feel part of an institution when their attempts to exchange ideas and implement programs are nearly always met with disdain?

Our administrators tell us their "doors are open." Well, that may be true, but when you walk in that open door, you'll find an empty office, or someone who can give you five minutes at the most. I know a lot of people will take issue with me on that, and I wish they would, because it happens to me 95 percent of the time. I have had appointments broken, interviews cut off and been bluntly told I am not worth an interruption in schedule. The sad part is, I know I'm not an exception on this campus.

I am a student, though. And before a student, I am a person who feels some sense of worth in herself. There seems to be a fear of giving criticism here, but I will take my life and grade point into my hands and call for some drastic changes in policies.

I know of no students who want to take over the campus or overthrow the administration. I certainly do not. But since our highest ranking campus officials have seen fit to be honest with me, I would like to return the favor.

Without students, there would be no faculty or chancellors. I know the staff on this campus is busy, but it seems rather ironic when everyone is too tied up in meetings to see students, who are the reason for those meetings. Therefore, I make no apologies for taking up anyone's time or asking questions. I feel that I and nearly 3000 other students are top priority on any administrator's list, whether he feels that way or not.

And, if any student wonders why the Almagest isn't always full of timely and informative news, blame part of it on inaccessibility. I rest my case.

School support commended

By Sandy Bellar

LSUS students, faculty administration should be commended for the VIP treatment and support given to Dr. Bruno Bettelheim, "the nation's most eminent psychologist," on his recent visit to Shreveport.

In a cooperative effort of the psychology department and the Psychology Club, Bettelheim was honored at a catered banquet in the "Snack Shack" which had been formally arranged with long banquet tables. More than 100 students, faculty and prominent psychologists and psychiatrists from the community attended the banquet.

Well-planned publicity accounted for the large audience in the packed Science Lecture Auditorium where many stood in the back or sat in the aisle during the evening lecture which was open to the general public.

As part of the series of guest lecturers sponsored by the Artists and Lecturers Committee, Bettelheim, of the department of education, psychology and psychiatry at the University of Chicago, is the highest paid speaker ever to appear at LSUS. Unequaled in attendance and interest, perhaps only Robert Katz, who last fall spoke about the cover-up of the Kennedy assassination and Tom Horton can possibly be compared to the psychologist.

More total effort and support should be given guest lecturers on our campus from the department which most closely relates to the speaker's topic. If renowned speakers will attain such support, perhaps it is time to think seriously of an activities fee enabling a quality of speaker such as Bettelheim to enrich the student intellect.

When the administration supports the individual efforts of its clubs and departments there is less apathy on the part of the students.

Letters to the editor:

To the Editor:

Poor, misguided "Searching Male" in the Classified Ads section has been searching for a female roommate to share bed and board with him for at least all of this semester thus far and part of last semester! Won't someone take pity on him (and on us who are tired of seeing the ad every week) and at least pretend to be interested so that perhaps he would take the ad out for one week?

What makes him think that he's going to get any takers after this long anyway? Surely everyone at the school and within the Almagest's "sphere of influence" has seen the ad a dozen times and are obviously not interested. The only other exposure that the ad might yield would perhaps be as a rug for an interested female parakeet.

The thought did occur that he has had dozens of applicants, but he is just very selective about the person with whom he wants to share his bed and uh, oh yes, board. However, I immediately discarded that possibility when I remembered that he had to put an ad in the paper in the first place. What a loser! Then again, it could be that his wife is intercepting the floods of mail and apparently doesn't like his idea of another roommate.

The only reason I dwell on this at all is that the ad is the type that sneaks up on one, like the Wrigleys' ad on the first page of the Sunday comics. First they have interesting little "Fun Facts to Know and Tell." After reading three or four, they hook me every time with "another fun fact is..." at which point the ad gives not a fact but an opinion that Wrigleys gum is great. His ad imposes itself in the same way.

My only consolation to others who are tired of this ad is that there are only so many issues of the Almagest left. My consolation to "Searching Male" is: "Don't let your masculine ego be crushed, but a nice bird might be a great comfort to you."

To the Editor,

From the historical point of view, it seems to me that the articles of a socio-political nature which have appeared in The Almagest, have been dominated by a "left-wing" tone. In order to balance out the scales of expression, it seems only fitting to produce an exposition advocating the "right-wing" stance.

At a time situated within my past, I had the good fortune of reading "Mein Kampf," by Adolf Hitler. Although not especially interested in politics at that time, it did make me wonder: why do many people cringe at the notion of Hitler and the movement which he created?

Approaching this problem with an open mind, I found the bulk of the problem was ignorance! Americans, poisoned by U.S. war propaganda and the post-war spoils of the victors, tend to accept most anything adverse about the "mean ole Nazis." "They killed twenty billion Jews;" "Hitler liked to kick pigeons;" etc. The best one was, "Hitler was hated by his own people."

When you stop to think about it, as I did, statements just as ridiculous as these are being digested by a number of supposedly knowledgeable people.

A history professor at a college I once attended exclaimed to his class, "Hitler's philosophy was to tell a lie long enough and convincingly enough, that people will take it for the truth." How close to a lie can you get? Yes, Hitler did say that, but in describing the Semitic modus operandi!

Incidences, such as this are common; it is the same as the policeman asking the absconding thief in disguise, "Which way did he go?" Ignorance has pointed her finger at many an innocent person.

I am sure there are many liberals in this reading audience that are offended by this tone. To be sure, there are people who call themselves liberal, but are only "liberal" towards liberal stimuli. To those, I can only suggest to them to quit reading. Heil Hitler!

'Open Door'

In an effort to keep an open line of communication between the students of LSUS and Chancellor Donald E. Shipp, the Almagest introduces "Open Door." If you have a comment or question related to the university, please write it down and either mail it to "Open Door" in care of the Almagest or drop it by the Almagest office, room 328 in the Liberal Arts Building. The questions will then be sorted by the Almagest staff and forwarded to Chancellor Shipp.

Three are passed

SGA studies new bills

By Randy Griffith

Three bills and one resolution all concerning such diverse topics as student legal rights, student representation on faculty committees and ash trays were studied in Friday's Student Government Association (SGA) senate meeting.

A package of three of the measures were voted on together and passed unanimously. One bill was sent to committee for further study.

Of the three package measures, two concerned money expenditures. One bill authorized $100 for a meeting of SGA presidents of the LSU system to discuss representation on the LSU management boards. The other bill commissioned $50 for SGA President Tony Sanders to buy ash trays and games for the "Snack Shack."

Sanders went to LSU-BR

Sanders and two senators went to Baton Rouge two weekends ago for a meeting with David Elkins, SGA president at LSU-Baton Rouge. The meeting never materialized, however, because Elkins did not show, according to Sanders.

Speaking for the bill, which was introduced by Preston Friedley, Sanders commented, "It might be beneficial if LSUS took the lead among other LSU schools" and called a meeting at this campus.

He also said LSUS and LSU-BR may be the only two schools in the system "that have any knowledge about what is going on" concerning student representation on state boards.

Terming it "bad system politics," he added, "Baton Rouge had an opportunity to call a meeting, to get everybody together and get this problem solved and they did not exercise it."

No date was set

Although the bill passed, no date was set for the meeting. However, Sanders indicated that guidelines must be established before the June meeting of the LSU Board of Supervisors.

Concerning the second money appropriation in the package, Sanders said it was "traditional" that the SGA buy ash trays, chess and checker sets for the "Snack Shack." The bill was also introduced by Friedley.

The final measure of the package was a resolution by John Meier authorizing another student representative on the Student Affairs committee and calling for more student representation on all faculty committees. Two students and 10 faculty members are on the Student Affairs Committee now.

Senate sent bill

The senate sent to committee a bill calling for a $250 appropriation to send delegates to a student legal rights conference at the University of Southwestern Louisiana.

The bill was introduced by Friedley and highly recommended by Sanders, who said the purpose of the meeting would be "to conduct workshops" and "come up with a common program on student rights we can institute statewide."

Campus sororities installed

By Phyllis Kline

Zeta Tau Alpha and Delta Delta sororities attained national status last weekend.

Eta Omega Chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha was honored with a reception sponsored by local alumnae and sister chapter, Beta Iota of Centenary, in the garden of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. The newly installed chapter was visited by their national president and other executive council members.

Awards were given to Kathy Smith, "Best Pledge", and Beck Hudsmith, "Best Scholarship". Joani Hunt is the chapter president.

Zeta Tau Alpha was founded in 1898 at Longwood College of Farmville, Virginia. Their colors are turquoise blue and steel gray. The organization's flower is the white violet.

Beta Rho Chapter of Delta Delta was honored with a reception at the Women's Department Club sponsored by local alumnae. The chapter was also visited by their executive council and three sister chapters, University of Southwestern Louisiana, LSU-Baton Rouge and Stephen F. Austin University. Kathy Steele is the chapter president.

Delta Delta Delta was founded in 1889 at Boston University on Thanksgiving Eve. Their colors are silver, gold and blue. The sorority's flower is the pansy.

The installation and initiation of Zeta Tau Alpha and Delta Delta Delta brings a total of three national sororities to LSUS.

"Jubilee" a recreated log dog-trot cabin was toured by LSUS students. The furnishings have been gathered by Goodloe R. Stuck, local history buff and former LSUS student. Located on the land settled by the Marshall family near Frierson, it is one of several plantation homes that serve Louisiana as a tourist attraction.

Civil War class visits plantations

By Sandy Bellar

A History 406 class, Civil War and Reconstruction, made a transition back to the 1850s with a recent trip to a restored area in Frierson, La., 10 miles south of Shreveport on the Ellerby Road.

Alan Thompson, assistant professor of history and course instructor, arranged the excursion to enable students "to compare the cultural and social aspects of pre-Civil War days with those of later dates."

The students saw buildings on the land that were originally acquired by Colonel Henry Marshall. On 10,000 acres his family and descendants built elaborate plantation homes and developed the land into a cotton goldmine.

"Land's End," the Marshall plantation home, is an example of houses unique to the rural south. Between 200 and 300 slaves lived on the home's immense grounds.

Also of interest to the group was the beautiful furnishings.

"According to the guide, huge pieces of furniture were brought by steamboat to the nearest landing point, Grand Cane near Coushatta. Then, wagons carried them to the house," said Thompson.

Other structures on the Marshall land include an Episcopal church used by the family with burial grounds nearby. The log dog-trot house and a blacksmith shop with bellows and tools of the trade is set on a picturesque spot of land complete with a pond and a rickety, wooden bridge. Inside the cabin, the original cast iron stove, a tin roof that can be seen through and a raised floor catch the visitor's eye.

Plantation dwellers shopped for calico at the Frierson Country Store which stands as it did in 1885 as a plantation commissary.

Slave cabins and a Negro Episcopal church are within three miles of the premises.

Campus Briefs

Six attend meetings

Five members of the English department will attend a South Central Renaissance Conference at Baylor University Thursday through Saturday.

They are Dr. Wilfred L. Guerin, professor; Dr. Zeak M. Buckner, associate professor; David E. Lawson, assistant professor; Allena Longfellow, instructor and Dr. Mary Ann McBride, dean of liberal arts.

Additionally, Nancy Sexton, assistant professor, will be a delegate to the Conference of Louisiana Colleges and Universities at Southeastern Louisiana University Friday and Saturday.

Tax Seminar

LSUS will offer a seminar on tax and inventory problems of small businesses March 13 through April 10.

Titled "Developing Your Own Managerial Skills For a Profitable Future," the course will meet 7-9 p.m. Thursdays in room 201 of the Liberal Arts Building. Fee is $20.

Discussion leaders are Ken Owens and D. L. Butler, both assistant professors of accounting. Topics will include inventory accounting and income tax consequences of partnerships, tax-option corporations and proprietorships.

Kappa Alpha

Kappa Alpha, social fraternity, will attend a province council at Southwestern Louisiana University this weekend. This will be the last meeting before the installation of the local chapter next weekend.

BSU

Baptist Student Union will have a work day March 15. Money raised will help sponsor LSUS students Norma Burnett and Charlie Walker in 10 weeks of mission projects this summer. Burnett will work in New York's inner city and Walker will travel with a musical group behind the Iron Curtain.

Officers Elected

New officers of the campus chapter of Student Louisiana Teachers Association include Paul Akers, senior speech major, president; Dominic Salinas, sophomore biology major, vice president; Kathy Steele, junior elementary education major, secretary; Dianne Greenlee, junior elementary education, treasurer; and Rebecca Roberts, senior English major, historian.

The officers will be installed March 12 at 3:45 p.m. in the Science Lecture Auditorium.

Conferences Attended

Dr. Jimmie N. Smith, vice chancellor for student affairs, and Ed Chase, director of student financial aid, attended an American College Test Education conference and workshop in Baton Rouge Wednesday and Thursday.

They are attending the Conference of Louisiana Colleges and Universities at Southeastern Louisiana University today and Saturday.

Movie Tonight

The next offering of the LSUS International Cinema Society is "Last Year in Marienbad," a movie with French dialog and English subtitles. The movie concerns the story of a beautiful woman who meets a man at a palatial hotel who tries to convince her they have met before and had an affair and planned to meet again and run away together. The film stresses the way in which people associate incidents in the past with incidents in the present.

The film will begin 8 p.m. tonight in the Science Lecture Auditorium. Membership in the club is $5 for all of the films or $2 per person at the door.

Officers for the International Cinema Society are: Dr. Currie K. Thompson, assistant professor of Spanish, president; Dr. Robert Leitz, assistant professor of English, membership chairman; Dr. Milton Finley, assistant professor of history, secretary-treasurer; Chryl Savoy, assistant professor of fine arts, house manager; and William McCleary, senior librarian, publicity chairman.

Club Forming

A new chapter of Phi Beta, a national organization of women interested in the arts, is being formed. There will be an organizational meeting March 12 at noon in room 304 of the Liberal Arts Building.

Any interested women are asked to attend or call Jorji Jarzabek at 865-1737.

Grad Announcements

Orders for graduation invitations will be taken in the bookstore March 7 through 12.

Interior Decorating

The Office of Conferences and Institutes will offer an interior decorating course March 6 through May 1.

The class is scheduled from 7-9:30 p.m. on Thursdays in room 263 of the Liberal Arts Building where students may preregister on a first-come, first-served basis. Fee is $35.

The non-credit program is for persons interested in creating a more pleasant and colorful home through understanding basic principles of interior design. Lectures and demonstrations and field trips will spotlight the following topics: color facts and families, furniture and arrangements, wall treatment, lighting, window and floor treatment, selection and care of table accessories, special rooms and dollar-wise decorating.

Persons wanting additional information may phone Powell at 865-7121, extension 262.

Delta Sigma Phi

Members of Delta Sigma Phi, social fraternity, attended a bidistrict conclave at Southern Methodist University Feb. 28-March 2.

Delegates were Stuart Pitts, president; Rusty Robertson, secretary; Jay Bowers, treasurer and Ken Jones. Dr. Joe Cutcher, faculty adviser, and Robert Pitts, district governor, accompanied the group.

Topics discussed ranged from rush to alumni relations. The forthcoming national convention at Vail, Colorado, was also discussed.

SLTA

The Student Louisiana Teachers Association will attend a drive-in conference at La. Tech March 13 and 14.

Registration will be 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. March 13 at Holiday Inn in Ruston. A banquet and student social are scheduled for 7 p.m. that evening. March 14 there will be workshops from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The March 13 banquet is not mandatory for those who wish to attend March 14 workshops.

For further details, contact Dr. Virginia Edleman in the College of Education or Paul Akers at 635-4889.

Livestock Judging

Five students participated in the Houston Intercollegiate Livestock Judging Contest this past weekend.

They are Claudia Laborde, Dianna Gerstmann, Alan Small, Rob Martin and David Wrye.

Dr. John G. Hall, associate professor of agriculture, accompanied the group.

Thomas Elected

Fabia Thomas, registrar, has been elected vice president for records and registration for the Southern Association of Collegiate Registrars and Admissions Officers (SACRAO).

Thomas is immediate past president of the Louisiana SACRAO.

Attention Workers

Students wanting to work in summer registration should sign up immediately in the registrar's office in the Science Building, according to Phyllis Graham, director of placement.

Reception Set

Alpha Phi, social sorority, will host a reception Sunday honoring the recently inducted Beta Rho chapter of Tri Delta and Eta Omega chapter of Zeta Tau Alpha.

The event will be at 2 p.m. in the Greenway Square Apartments club room.

By noted psychoanalyst

Youth discussed

By Sandy Bellar

Childhood schizophrenia and an analysis of today's youth were the topics of recent lectures on campus presented by Dr. Bruno Bettelheim, professor in the departments of Education, Psychology and Psychiatry at the University of Chicago.

Bettelheim, sponsored by the Artists and Lecturers Committee, was the Psychology Club's guest of honor at a banquet attended by more than 100 students, faculty and local psychiatrists and psychologists.

Bettelheim, born in Vienna, Austria, was a student of Freud at the University of Vienna where he received a Ph.D. in Philosophy and Psychology.

After coming to the United States in 1939, he became well-known as an author, lecturer, teacher and psychologist. His books deal with social psychology and describe his work as a psychoanalyst in the Orthogenic School rehabilitating severely disturbed children.

Also, his articles appear in professional journals as well as monthly magazines.

In formal introductions, the after-dinner speaker was welcomed to LSUS by Perry Hill, club president, Dr. George Kemp, psychology department chairman, and chancellor Donald E. Shipp.

Hopeless cases can be cured

The psychoanalyst spoke of personal experiences in handling "hopeless cases" of severely emotionally disturbed children in the Orthogenic School, the University of Chicago's treatment center, which he founded and has directed for 20 years.

"In the treatment of infantile autism, the most extreme form of the childhood schizophrenias, to be of help to the patient, a professional must recognize his own limitations. Also, although every child cannot be helped, it is important not to shy away from desperate cases," he said.

"Therefore," added Bettelheim, "the inner reward is tremendous if you work with a hopeless, mute autistic child who recovers. The analyst has the advantage in such cases because it is already a hopeless case."

"In dealing with psychiatric patients, one must give them the right to be as crazy as they want. Many of the 'hopeless cases' do get well and when cured go into therapeutic education," he concluded.

Drug use starts in the home

Later, in a more formal speech in the Science Lecture Auditorium, Bettelheim compared today's youth with those of past generations.

Family life and its relationship to modern social problems of drugs, the working mother and family structure were discussed.

"Drug use starts in the home because of a feeling of desperation. The difference in drug use is that in the past drugs were used in the sub-strata of society where the hopelessness of slum existence prevailed.

However, the use of expensive drugs of today's youth emphasizes the affluence of society," said Bettelheim.

"Also in America today everyone expects life to be easy; if there is trouble, pop a pill and glorious happiness results. Survival thrived on overcoming difficulties in the past.

"It is as if people expect a life of all frosting. Of course, you know what you get when you eat too much frosting — a stomach ache," he added.

Women always worked hard

"It is necessary to point out in a comparison in today's working mother with those of the past that throughout history women have always worked hard.

"The only exception is the Victorian upper-class. Women had the responsibility for weaving the cloth that made the family's clothes as well as killing and plucking the chicken for their dinner," he said.

"Moreover, the only difference is that the modern mother works outside of the home; the amount of time spent with the children is equal to or more than the mother who washed on Monday, ironed on Tuesday and sewed on Wednesday," he added.

Early maturity of children in advanced countries accounts for much stress and strain on the adolescent according to Bettelheim. A child reaches maturity by 12 or 13, but he is kept dependent on his family economically and psychologically for five to ten years longer. However, in other countries, schooling ends at 14, the psychoanalyst said.

"In summary, each generation is concerned with its relationship between parents and children. It is complicated today because of a rapidly changing society. Children need self-love in order to respect themselves and others. For a total relationship, respect combined with love is one answer to the generation gap," he concluded.

Bettelheim is a founding member of the National Academy of Education, a fellow and diplomat of the American Psychological Association, a fellow of the Orthopsychiatric Association, a member of the Chicago Psychoanalytic Society, the Chicago Council for Child Psychiatry and is a Stella M. Rowley Distinguished Service Professor of Education.

Artist fulfills life mission

By Garrett Stearns

Phobai Hefelfinger fulfills her mission in life by painting.

Phobai, as she is known in the art world, is the guest artist featured this month in the LSUS Library. The artist displays 24 of her paintings along with 16 watercolor florals painted by her mother, the late Florence Crane.

"When are you going to stop painting such depressing pictures, Phobai?" a friend asked the artist upon viewing a display of her works. Born in Korea, Phobai has a natural feel for "the dispossessed, the suffering and the oppressed people of the world."

Others may be surprised that the wife of a preacher paints nudes — and so joyfully. In answer to this she is always ready with her 10 minute lecture on "the holy beauty of life as God made it." And she will quickly point out that "sin is in the eye of the beholder."

Has religious background

If her conversation sounds loaded with theological terms, it is because she is the wife of a Presbyterian minister and the daughter of a Presbyterian missionary. The artist has also, herself, worked in the church professionally.

Now Phobai feels that she "fulfills her mission in life by her art 'and has' to work very hard to keep from preaching in paint." Still one cannot study too many of her paintings and fail to feel the underlying joy expressed in pigment by her talented strokes.

She feels she is growing steadily as an artist and becoming "more able all the time" to say what she wants to say. Her pastel and watercolor techniques are especially unusual.

Phobai feels that she has "rediscovered that the likeness is in the gesture (pose) of the figure, rather than in the features of the face." She always insists that her portrait subject fall into a natural position, and prefers to do the full figure. "Hands and feet say so much," she said.

Mother's works explained

"I always remember that her hands were busy," says Phobai of her mother, Florence Crane. "And she kept me painting so she could paint," she added.

Florence Crane's works are decidedly oriental in flavor since the late Mrs. Crane spent 40 years in Korea as the wife of a missionary. "In Korea she received from President Pak the highest honor ever bestowed upon a woman in recognition of her service in portraying the beauties of that land," according to Phobai.

Phobai describes her mother's works as "designful though realistic in her treatment of flowers and landscape. Her colors are startling and daringly combined."

The guest artist will be in Shreveport during the month of March and will be available for consultation as well as being able to do portraits. Phobai may be contacted through Senior Librarian William McCleary in the library.

From Shreveport Phobai's showing goes to the Mississippi State Museum in Jackson, Miss.

Introspect... God promises salvation

By Carl Smith
Contributing Writer

There are not many people who make New Year's resolutions anymore. Probably because we've learned that resolutions are easier to break than keep.

The promise of a new beginning, new start or clean slate just because we change the number of the year on January 1 is a lie. Last January 1 we woke up in the same house with the same people and the same problems as December 31. The grades we received in December are still on the books on January 1 no matter what you resolved. The promise of another January 1 held no comfort of anything new or better for Janis Joplin and she took her own life with an overdose of drugs.

Several years ago Peggy Lee recorded a song in which she recounted several experiences of life that spoke of destruction, death and unhappiness. The chorus underscores the futility of life with "is that all there is? If that's all there is let's just keep dancing, let's break out the booze and have a ball — if that's all."

The fact is that the only thing that makes anything significantly different is a new relationship. You make a new friend or fall in love and you begin to go new places and have new experiences. That's the heart of the Christian message.

When you come into a personal relationship with Christ you become a "new creature. Old things are passed away, all things become New." II Corinthians 5:17) God's forgiveness and a new relationship with Him opens the door to new life. New opportunities and new purpose. That's the answer to the song.

That's not all there is, there's more. The scripture says, "If by His (Christ's) blood — He has done so much for us while we were yet sinners. How much more will He do for us now that He has counted us not guilty." (Romans 5:9) The call of the New Testament gospel then is to life! Jesus said, "I am come that you might have life, and that you might have it more abundantly."

Faculty active

Six faculty members at LSUS will participate in various professional activities this weekend.

Larry E. Farmer, accounting instructor, will present a paper, "Dual Betas: An Exploratory Study," at a Southwestern Finance Association Meeting in Houston today.

Dr. Joseph Parker, associate professor of political science, and Hubert Humphreys, assistant professor of history, will be commentators on a panel on the Louisiana Constitutional Convention of 1973 at a Louisiana Political Science Association meeting today and Saturday at Centenary College.

Dr. Wayne F. Brown, assistant professor of biological sciences, will attend the Louisiana Conference on Education in the biological sciences division of the Conference of Louisiana Colleges and Universities at Southeastern Louisiana University today and Saturday.

Discussion topics will include career opportunities in allied and professional health and for minority groups.

Dr. John W. Hall, associate professor and chairman of the social sciences department, will attend a conference of geographers and folklorists at Texas A&M University today through Sunday for research on the publication of the first Atlas of North American Folklore.

Dr. John L. Berton, professor of business administration, is attending the annual meeting of Southwestern Federation of Administrative Disciplines in Houston Saturday.

Health Science club will sponsor sale

By Irvin Schueler

Eta Sigma Gamma, Health Science Club, (LSUS) will sponsor a rummage sale March 7-9 at the Oak Terrace Pavilion on Quilen Road, according to Dr. Selveston Jimes, associate professor of biological sciences.

The sale will be from 2 p. m. - 8:30 p. m. on the 7th; 8 a. m. - 8 p. m. on the 8th; and 8:00 a. m. - 3:00 p. m. on the 9th.

Twenty-five members are committed to make the trip on May 12-14. The trip will include visits to the Oschner's Clinic and Charity Hospital.

Items listed

David Gorsulowsky, club president, said items to be sold include new and used men's and women's clothing, used household appliances, household items such as flower pots, used furniture, flatware, pots, pans, dishes, pictures, etc.

There will also be a variety of used hardbound and paperback books. "The new clothing was donated by local business firms and the used items were donated by club members or from the "Trips are periodically made to local hospitals, but the New community," Gorsulowsky said.

The purpose of the sale is to raise funds to finance a club field trip to New Orleans. Money from the sale will be used to defray the cost of transportation, lodging, and food. Orleans trip will provide exposure to much more in-depth and specialized facilities than exist in the immediate area," said Dr. Jimes. "Oschner's Clinic is renowned for specialized diagnosis of diseases, and our prospective itinerary anticipates viewing surgery at the clinic," he added.

"At Charity Hospital we hope to see the psychiatric ward and observe various psychiatric diseases, tour the clinical laboratory where chemistry, microbiology, and blood banking functions are accomplished, and also tour the alcohol ward and attend a seminar on alcohol conducted by the nurses and physicians of the ward, Dr. Jimes said.

Conference for women

By Jackie Lower
Contributing Writer

A conference for women will be held at LSUS on March 15 from 9:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. in the Science Lecture Auditorium.

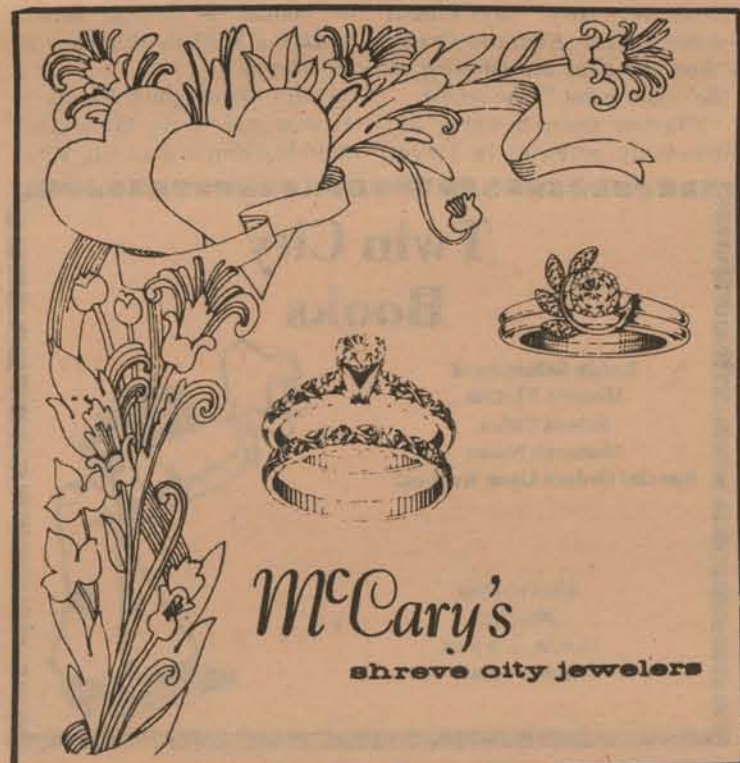

The theme of the seminar is "Stop the World, We Want To Get On." The purpose is for local women to assess their individual roles and to develop their interests and talents by sharing experiences and be learning more about local resources available.

The conference is sponsored by the Shreveport Branch of the American Association of University Women (AAUW).

Registration will be from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. and is open to anyone who would like to attend. The registration fee of $3.50 includes lunch.

Leading discussion groups will be Mrs. Lee Tidwell, president of the Fourth District of the Louisiana Federated Women's clubs; Mrs. Edwin Horne, board member of the Junior League of Shreveport; Margie Townsend, president of the local chapter of the National Organization for Women (NOW); Dr. Marty Beasley of Ruston, educational area representative for AAUW; and Doris McWilliams, president of the Louisiana League of Women Voters. Each will offer information about how women work within the respective group.

funds. The information that we have now is that the racetrack is just a dead issue."

Responding to questions from other senators and the Almagest, Chancellor Shipp said:

—The University Center will include offices for student publications, the SGA and the director of the student activities. It will also contain meeting rooms for university organizations. Food service, because of the problems involved, will probably be bid out to a private enterprise. No theatre will be included in the building, but there will be "an arrangement of three large conference rooms" that can be converted into one large assembly room. The assembly room will contain a projection facility, a small stage, and will have folding chairs that will seat 800.

—No consideration has been given to the sale of alcoholic beverages in the University Center. "You are aware that the board (LSU Board of Supervisors) approved consumption of alcoholic beverages at social functions, in particular, in a student center building. We are always open to suggestions. I am not eager for one like that," he said.

—that after completion of the University Center, he is considering turning the "Snack Shack" over to the fine arts department and maintenance and operations department.

—the student bill of rights submitted to him by the SGA is not acceptable in its present form. "The document presented to me had several areas in conflict with our Board of Supervisors regulations. There are quite a few things that have to be worked out," he said.

—that he could see no way of establishing a day care center on campus, saying there was neither funding or a building available. In addition, the chances are "slim" that the school would establish one off campus, he said, but would consider, if the need could be shown, working to get a private agency to open one adjacent to the campus.

—there was no possibility that a grade appeals board could be established. "That whole area is more complex than just proposing, he said. Citing the "problem of academic freedom involved for a faculty member to perform his job without outside interference," the chancellor said that the present process of students appealing from the faculty member, up through academic affairs and ultimately to him was adequate.

—that with its existing manpower, he believed the library could not be open more hours. "Dr. Parker (the director of the library) is presently maintaining the maximum hours possible." The chancellor said that additional help would have to be hired and the matter would be investigated.

Rigoletto to be presented

By Eleanor Cullick
Contributing Writer

The Shreveport Symphony Opera Company, under the baton of Maestro John Shenaut and direction of Centenary College's Bob Buseick, will present "Rigoletto" at the Civic Theater April 6 and 7.

The lead role of the Duke will be sung by John Carpenter, assistant professor of voice at Northwestern and a recent winner of the finals in the 17th Annual WGN-Illinois Opera Guild "Auditions of the Air." Carpenter was also a regional finalist in the 1971 Metropolitan Opera Auditions.

Vernon Hartman, a resident of Philadelphia, will appear in the title role. He has performed with the Opera Workshop at North Texas State University and with the Fort Worth Symphony.

New York bass Harris Poor will appear in the role of Sparafucile. A veteran of many opera productions, Poor has sung with the St. Paul Opera, Brooklyn Civic Opera and the New York Lyric Opera.

Richard Owens of Dallas has been cast in the role of Nonterone. He is the founder and Director of the Summer Vocal Institute in Graz, Austria. Susan Schafer, this year's winner of the Shreveport Symphony Annual Voice Auditions and a student at North Texas State, will sing the role of Magdalena.

Included in the cast are several local singers. Mary Beth Armes, chairman of the voice department at Centenary College, will appear as Gilda. Monas Harlan, also of Centenary, will sing the role of Borsa. Ken Dooley, Diane Moncure, Nita Renshaw and Carroll Atkins are also featured. The set will be designed by Kip Holloway.

The Dunking Do-nuts and Acid Freaks continued to be undefeated in this week's IM basketball standings.

The Do-nuts lead League 1, followed by the Soul Patrol, the Greenway Gang and Mac's Pac each with identical 2 and 2 records. The Mean Machine trails the pack with a 1 and 3 record.

In League 2, the Strangers and Registers trail the Acid Freaks at 2 and 1, the Misfits at 1 and 2 in third, and the Stud Service and Dudes at 0 and 3.

The Soul Patrol's Serge Homes is the scoring leader with a 25 point total, and Gary Loftin of the Strangers is only one point behind with 24 points.

The league-leading Acid Freaks' Larry Henderson is the third leading scoring with 22 points. The Mean Machine boasts two scorers in the top 5 in John Smith and Paul Caldwell, each with 19 points, and Mike Petree of Mac's Pac rounds out the leaders with 17.

Shreveport Steamer close

The Shreveport Steamer is inching close to its $1.2 million goal, the deadline set for reaching the final amount is March 14. The last figure released by the Steamer Corporation was $1,054,000.

Championship games begin

The Top 20 Prep Basketball Championship games will be played Saturday at Rapides Coliseum in Alexandria. The Class B final will be at 2 p. m., followed by the Class AA championship at 3:30 and the Class A championship at 7 p. m. The Class AAAA match-up will end the tourney at 8 p. m.

Demons Fall

The Northwestern State University Demons fell from the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletes District 30 basketball playoffs Monday night with an 87-74 loss to Alcorn State University. The Gulf State Conference Champion Demons, playing without their star freshman Lester Elie, trailed by 10 to 18 points most of the game.

They did, however, get 23 points from senior guard Errick Hunt, and 15 points and 17 rebounds from junior Bernard Holder.

"We suspect that an over-emphasis on specific technical training has been evident in the national media in the last few months. For example, Eric Sevareid in a commentary on the CBS News pointed out the necessity for problem-solving abilities as opposed to narrow specialization," Dean McBride explained.

Student Government Association senators assisting in the program are Sandra Beck, Preston Friedley and John Meier.

Chairman of the College of Liberal Arts Placement Committee is Dr. Joseph Parker. Others on the committee include Dr. Wilfred Guerin, Dr. Lillian Hall, Hubert Humphreys, Dr. Bruce Lancaster, Nancy Sexton, Dr. Currie K. Thompson and Dean McBride.

Dean McBride added that the program is also open to the general public who is interested in the Liberal Arts Program at LSUS.
